About the Publisher

Pronouncing Portuguese

Portuguese is much easier to read than to speak. However, the pronunciation guide used in this book gives as accurate a guide as possible to the sounds of the language. The syllable to be stressed is printed in bold. Note that in conversation words tend to run together.

Vowels (a, e, i, o, u) vowel	example	pronunciation	sounds like a	saco	sah -koo	as in f a ther fama	fum uh	h u m fica	feek uh	a bout e	terra	terr -uh	t e rror enorme	eh -norm	e henquire esecial	e esh- pess yahl	happy de	du h	a bout i	fica	feek uh	pol i ce medico	med ee koo	happy o	cobra	koh -bruh	a ll homem	om ayñ	a u pair vaso	vah-zoo	boot

u	luvas	loovush	boot

Notes:

The article a sounds like uh (as in the), unless stressed, i.e. à (ah).

e can sound like ay, e.g. fecho (fayshoo), but tends to be silent at the end of words, e.g. pode (pod) unless stressed, e.g. bebé (be-be). The word e (meaning and) always sounds like ee.

The article o and the letter o at the end of words always sound like oo.

Vowel combinations

ai	mais	mysh
ei	peixe	paysh
oi	coisa	koy -zuh
ou	outro	oh -troo

Nasal vowels

Vowels with a tilde ~ or followed by m or n in the same syllable should be pronounced nasally (letting air out through the nose as well as the mouth), as in French. We have represented this sound in the pronunciation by ñ, e.g.

tem = tayñ com = koñ um = ooñ pão = powñ manhã = munyañ põe = poyñ

Other letters

	example	pronunciation	sounds like ç	serviço	servee ç oo ch	chá	sh ah
g	gelo	zhay -loo	as in mea g ure h			always silent
j	loja	lozh uh	as in mea j ure lh	mulher	mool- yeh r nh	tenho	ten -yoo
r/rr		always rolled; 'r' at beginning of word and double 'rr' are forceful and guttural (similar to French 'r') s	(between vowels)	koy -z uh coisa

	(after vowel and at end of word) está lápis	s hta lah-peesh x	caixa	ky-shuh
z	(at end of word) faz	f ash

Top ten tips

- 1 Use the formal form of address until you are asked to use the familiar form. Wait until you are invited to use first names.
- 2 There is no official religion, but the population predominantly identifies as Roman Catholic, this being stronger in the north than in the south.
- 3 It is a legal requirement in Portugal that everyone carries photographic proof of identity at all times.
- 4 Portuguese people are very proud of their culture, which is different from that of Spain!
- 5 To hire a car you often have to be at least 21, depending on the car hire company and on the vehicle. Often your driving licence must have been issued at least one year before, and if you are under 25 there may be an extra fee to pay.
- 6 Portuguese people have a sweet tooth; try some of their specialities such as Toucinho do Céu (heaven's bacon) and Barriga de Freira (nun's belly).
- 7 Most shopping centres are open 7 days a week from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. or in some cases until midnight.
- 8 There are more than one thousand recipes to cook cod; one of the most famous is Bacalhau à Brás.
- 9 In restaurants, you have to ask for the bill; it's considered impolite of the waiter to bring the bill if you haven't asked for it.

- 10 Bars and restaurants tend to close on Sundays, except in busy areas such as Lisbon and the Algarve.

Talking to people

You will find that Portuguese people are quite formal and will appreciate it if you take the same approach to them as they take towards you.

Polite expressions

There are three forms of address in Portuguese: formal (o senhor/a senhora), semi-formal (você – for both sexes) and informal (tu – for both sexes). Always stick to the formal when addressing older people, or the semi-formal for people of your own age and status, until you are invited to use the informal tu.

Metro

There are now four metro systems in Portugal: Lisbon, Porto, Almada (across the river Tagus) and Mirandela (in the North). Mirandela and Almada are both overground networks. You can buy a monthly season ticket with an ID photo (um passe) or a cartão viva viagem which you can top up. These cards allow you to travel on both metro and bus services.

There are two types of train ticket for all trains: conforto (1st class) and turística (2nd class). On longer trips, where it is advisable to book ahead (reservar lugares), you can book online. The Alfa Pendular is a fast, intercity train and the most expensive. The Intercidades is a fast, long-distance service, and the medium-distance Inter-Regional stops at all the main stations.

Taxi

Taxis in Portugal have an illuminated taxi sign on top and are usually painted beige, but some older ones are still green and black. The driver's ID and the meter should both be displayed inside the car. There is a fixed tariff starting at €3.25, but increasing to €3.90 after 9 p.m., at weekends, and during holidays. Within the city you can get a standard fare, but outside the city limits you'll be charged per kilometre, and the driver is entitled to charge for the return fare. You'll also pay a surcharge if you are travelling with luggage. To ask for a receipt, say Queria uma fatura, por favor. It's a good idea to ask for this in advance, as you get in the car.

Car hire

Car rental companies in Portugal normally have a minimum age for hiring a car (21, 23 or 25, depending on the company and type of vehicle). Some companies also have a maximum age limit of 75. A small number of companies will rent to drivers under 21, provided they pay a 'young driver' surcharge.

Breakdown

The Portuguese equivalent of the AA is ACP (Automóvel Clube de Portugal). ACP has partnerships with many foreign associations, so if your car breaks down, you should call your own country's roadside assistance company (e.g. the AA) and they will contact ACP to help you.

Entertainment

There are traditional festivities in June dedicated to the Santos Populares. Saints vary in popularity depending on the location; Santo António (St Anthony) is very popular in Lisbon, and São João (St John) in Porto. A beautiful street parade takes place all over Lisbon, the festivities being seen as a competition between Lisbon's bairros (neighbourhoods). You'll find dancing, eating and drinking in the streets of various regions of the city (Bairro Alto, Alfama and Mouraria to name a few).

In a restaurant

It is considered good manners to always eat with the appropriate knife and fork for meat or fish, however it is acceptable to eat chicken or pizza with your hands. It's common to say Bom appetite before you start your meal and it's polite to wipe your mouth before and after sipping wine or water. For tipping, there is no fixed amount: 10% is considered fair, but not mandatory.

Types of port Porto

Port wines offer a wide variety of styles, making them suitable for all occasions and also for serving with food. The main types are:

White (which can be sweet or dry, so check the label). Good on its own or as an aperitif. It should be chilled and can be made into a long drink with a little ice and a twist of lemon.

Ruby is a blend of young ports, ready to drink, spicy and fruity. Sweet and ruby in colour. No need to decant.

Tawny is a blend from various harvests. It has a rich amber colour, a long finish and complex aroma. Look for labels indicating its age (10, 20, 30 years old). It is ready to drink and does not need decanting. This is the most popular style.

Vintage Port is a wine from an exceptional declared harvest. Matured in wood for two or three years, it is bottled and continues to mature, for at least 10 years, or much longer. It must be decanted. It is dark and rich, becoming softer and more complex as it ages. There are intermediate styles (LBV, for example). The label should help.

Types of madeira Madeira

Madeira wines, like ports, can be served as an aperitif, for dessert or on any other occasion. The four categories are:

Sercial quite dry and pale

Verdelho less dry and slightly darker than Sercial

Boal richer-coloured and sweeter

Malvasia dark, very perfumed, full-bodied and very sweet

Whatever their category, these wines are always very aromatic and complex. The drier styles should be served chilled.

Time

The 24-hour clock is used a lot more than in Britain. After 1200 midday, it continues: 1300 - treze horas, 1400 - catorze horas, 1500 - quinze horas, etc., until 2400 - vinte e quatro horas (meia-noite). With the 24-hour clock, the words quarto (quarter) and meia (half) aren't used:

Public holidays

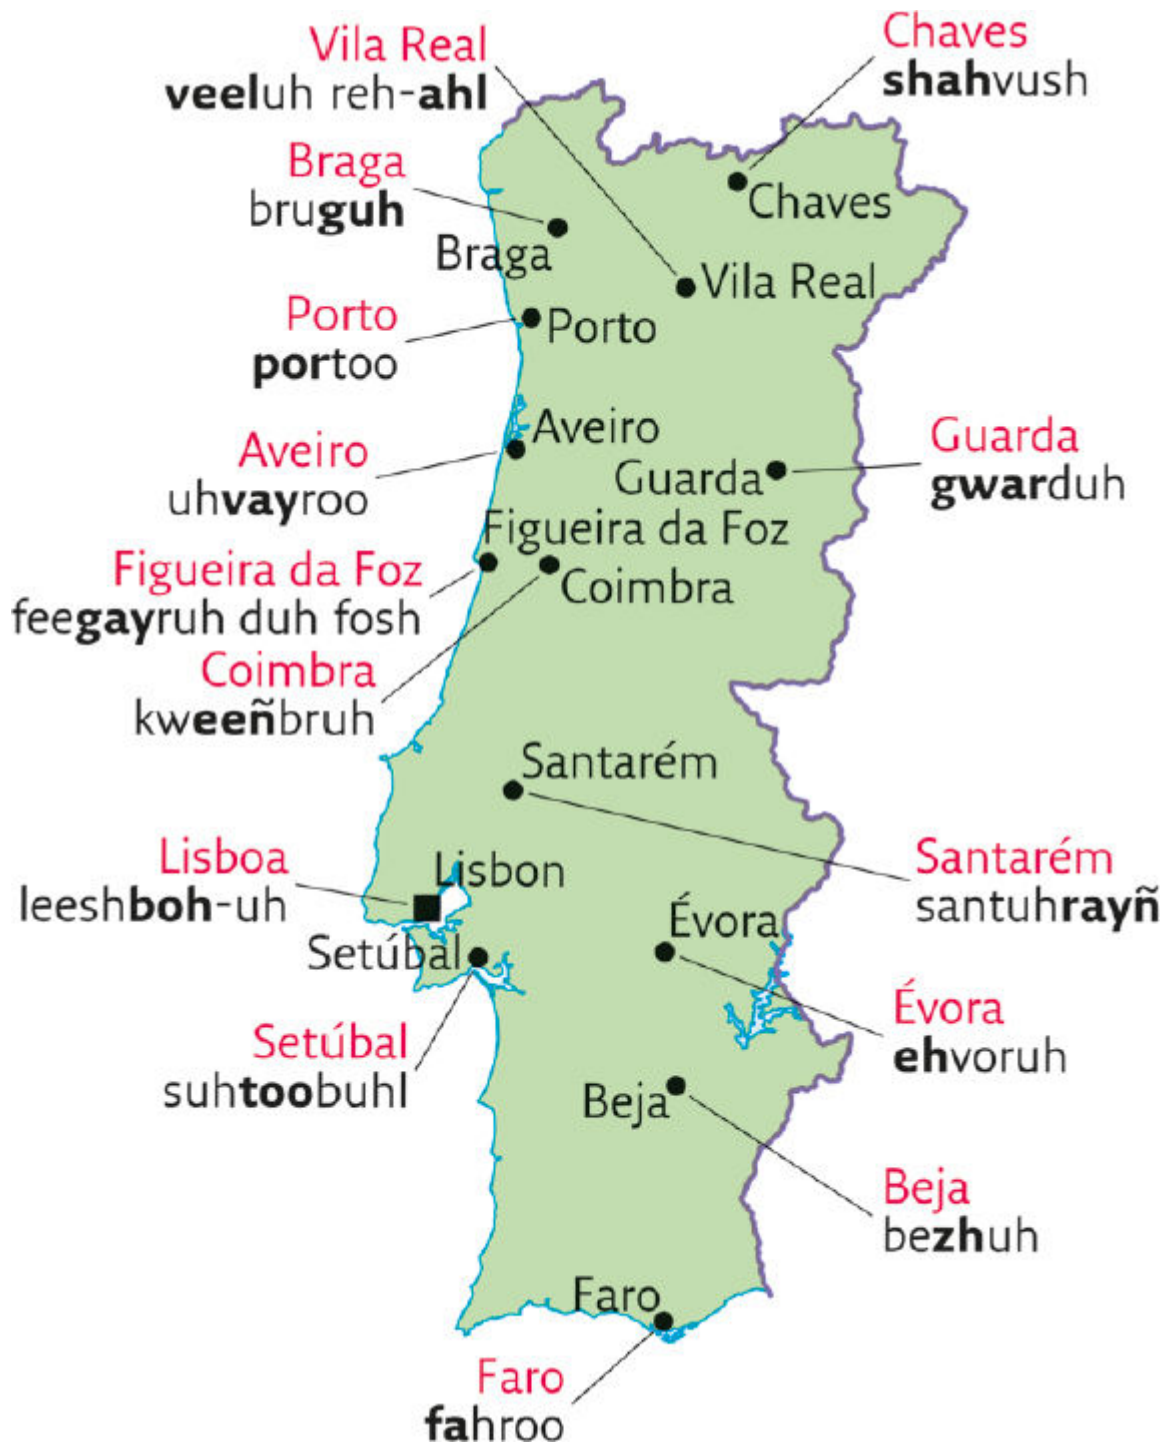

Unlike the UK, public holidays in Portugal are always on the given date (even if they fall on a Sunday).

January 1	Ano Novo New Year's Day
March/April	Sexta-Feira Santa Good Friday
March/April	Páscoa Easter Sunday
April 25	Dia da Liberdade Freedom Day
May 1	Dia do Trabalhador Labour Day
June 10	Dia de Portugal Portugal Day
August 15	Assunção Assumption of Mary
December 8	Imaculada Conceição de Maria Immaculate Conception of Mary December 25	Natal Christmas Day

Phonetic map

When travelling in Portugal, you will need to bear in mind that place names as we know them are not necessarily the same in Portuguese. Imagine if you wanted to buy tickets at a train station but couldn't see your destination on the departures list! This handy map eliminates such problems by indicating the locations and local pronunciations of major towns and cities.

Grammar

Nouns

Portuguese nouns are masculine or feminine, and their gender is shown by the words for 'the' (o/a) and 'a' (um/uma) used before them (articles):

	masculine	feminine singular	o castelo the castle	a mesa the table um castelo a castle	uma mesa a table plural	os castelos the castles	as mesas the tables
	(uns) castelos (some) castles	(umas) mesas (some) tables

Nouns ending in -o or -or are usually masculine. Those ending in -a, -agem, -dade and -tude tend to be feminine. Nouns ending in a vowel form the plural by adding -s, while those ending in a consonant usually add -es. Words ending in -m change to -ns, and words ending in -l, change to -is.

Note: When used after the words a (to), de (of), em (in) and por (by), articles (and many other words) contract:

a + as = às ash to the de + um = dum dooñ of a em + uma = numa noo- to a muh por + os = pelos peh-loosh by the

This, that, these, those...

These depend on the gender and number of the noun they represent:

este rapaz

this boy estes rapazes these boys esse rapaz

that boy

esses rapazes

those boys aquele rapaz

that boy (over there)

aqueles rapazes

those boys (over there) esta rapariga

this girl

estas raparigas

these girls essa rapariga

that girl essas raparigas

those girls

aquela rapariga

that girl (over there)

aquelas raparigas

those girls (over there)

Adjectives

Portuguese adjectives normally follow the nouns they describe and reflect the gender in e.g. a maçã verde the green apple. The exceptions are bom (good) and grande (great, big) which can go before the noun.

To make an adjective feminine, -o endings change to -a, and -or and -ês change to -ora and -esa. Otherwise they generally have the same form for both genders.

masculine		feminine
the red book	o livro vermelho	the red skirt	a saia vermelha the talkative man	o homem falador	the talkative woman	a mulher faladora

To make adjectives plural, follow the rules given for nouns.

My, your, his, her...

These words depend on the gender and number of the noun and not the sex of the 'owner'.

	with masc./fem.	with plural nouns my	o meu/a minha	os meus/as minhas his/her/its/your	o seu/a sua	os seus/as suas our	o nosso/a nossa	os nossos/as nossas your	o vosso/a vossa	os vossos/as vossas their/your	o seu/a sua	os seus/as suas

Note: Since o seu, a sua, etc. can mean 'his', 'her', 'your', etc., the words dele, dela, deles and delas are often used to avoid confusion:

os livros dela

her books

os livros deles

their books

Pronouns

subject		object
I	eu ay-oo	me	me muh
you (informal)	tu too	you (informal)	te teh you	você voh-say	you	o/a oo/uh he	ele ayl	him	o oo
she	ela ayluh	her	a uh it	ele/ela ayl/ayluh	it	o/a oo/uh we	nós nosh	us	nos noosh you	vós vosh	you	vos voosh they (masc.)	eles aylush	them (masc.)	os oosh they (fem.)	elas elush	them (fem.)	as ush you (informal)	vocês voh-saysh	you (informal)	os/as oosh/ush

Notes

1. Use of 'you': The polite way of addressing someone would be with o senhor or a senhora, using the (s)he form of the verb and the object pronoun o/a. The semi-formal 'you' is você, however some people dislike você and consider it slightly coarse. An alternative semi-formal way of addressing someone is to use the 'he/she/it' form of the verb, plus the person's name, e.g. A Laura vem a Portugal? Are you coming to Portugal, Laura? The the informal 'you' is tu (as in French).
2. Subject pronouns are normally not used except for emphasis or to avoid confusion:

eu vou para Lisboa e ele vai para Coimbra

I'm going to Lisbon and he's going to Coimbra

3. Object pronouns are usually placed after the verb and joined with a hyphen:

vejo-o

I see him

However, in sentences beginning with a 'question' or 'negative' word, the pronoun goes in front of the verb:

quando o viu?

when did you see him?

não o vi

I did not see him

In phrases beginning with 'that', 'who', etc. (subordinate clauses), the pronoun also precedes the verb:

sei que o viu

I know that you saw him o homem que o viu

the man who saw him

4. Use of 'me': me = to me and nos = to us, but lhe = to him/to her/to it/to you (formal), te = to you (informal), vos = to you (plural) and lhes = to them/to you.

Verbs

Portuguese regular verbs follow one of three patterns of endings. Examples of the present and past tenses are given overleaf.

Present tense

Irregular verbs don't follow a pattern, so you need to learn their endings. Four of the most common verbs are irregular:

ser	to be
sou	I am
és	you are é	(s)he/it is/you are somos	we are sois	you are são	they/you are

estar	to be estou	I am

vais	you go
vai	(s)he/it goes/you go vamos	we go
ides	you go
vão	they/you go

Note: Ser and estar both mean 'to be'.

Ser is used to describe a permanent place or state:

sou inglês	I am English é uma praia	it is a beach

Estar is used to describe a temporary state or where something is located:

como está?	how are you?
onde está o livro?	where is the book?
